GENERAL INVESTIGATION

- 1) Mean of class - One of the parameters of normal distribution characterizing its position. It is the arithmetic mean of a random or equally probable occurring quantities, or, in substance, the displacement of several lines with equal number of counts. Mean of class is calculated by the formula: $m = \sum_{i=1}^n x_i \cdot n_i / n$, where x_i is the value of the class, n_i is the number of a base class, n is the sum of frequencies of the class and n_i is the number of observations.
- 2) Range and range of errors - The class 17% characterizes the range of errors in the experiment. The range is the difference between the maximum and minimum values of the results of the experiment. The range of errors is the difference between the maximum and minimum values of the results of the experiment.
- 3) Standard class of observation - The standard 10% characterizes the standard deviation of the results of the experiment. It is the square root of the variance of the results of the experiment.
- 4) Observing conditions or economy out of production - One of the most important parameters characterizing the results of the experiment. It is the ratio of the results of the experiment to the results of the production.
- 5) Mean of observation - The mean of observation of a class characterizes the position of the results of the experiment. It is the arithmetic mean of the results of the experiment.
